- All `fieldset` elements should be labeled with `legend` elements.
The first child element inside a `fieldset` must be a `legend` element, which provides a label or description for the group. `legend` elements in other positions may be ignored.

- An element with a `role` that hides child elements contains focusable child elements.
This `role` element marks child elements as presentational, which hides them from the accessibility tree, but some of these children are focusable, so they can be navigated to, but are not voiced in a screen reader.

- An element with `aria-hidden=true` contains focusable content.

The hidden element and its contents are not voiced by a screen reader, but the contents contain an element with `tabindex` set or active `a`, `button`, `input`, `select` and `textarea` controls. The user can tab to these or focus via touch and hears only silence.

● Each `a` element must contain text or an `img` with an `alt` attribute.

- Add text between the `a` element start and end tags
- Add an `aria-label` attribute
- Add an `aria-labelledby` attribute
- Add an `img alt` attribute if the link contains an `img` element. `img` elements with `role=presentation` or `role=none` are not included in the link's accessible name. `img` elements with `display:none` or `visibility:hidden` are not included in the link's accessible name. Some lazy loader scripts hide images until they scroll into view, but screen readers can voice links below the fold (via the List Links command) resulting in reading links with no name.

- Identify row and column headers in data tables using `th` elements, and mark layout tables with `role=presentation` .

Data tables allow screen reader users to understand column and row relationships. Layout tables read cells as a series of unrelated paragraphs with no tabular structure. Without `th` or `role` , screen readers apply heuristics to decide whether a table is a layout table or data table. These heuristics vary greatly between screen readers, and are affected by browser being used, window size, and font size (so the outcome is very unpredictable without `th` or `role` ). If a data table has headers marked up using `td` , then change these to `th` . If a data table has no headers, add `th` elements describing each row and/or column. If the table is only used for layout add `role=presentation` to the `table` element.

- JAWS Reading: Treats tables without `th` and `role` as layout tables if the table contains cells above or below certain pixel sizes. This measurement is affected by browser window size, browser font size, and the browser used.
- NVDA Reading: Applies a layout table heuristic to tables without `th` and `role` which varies depending on the browser used and on the window size in some circumstances.
- VoiceOver Reading: Uses a sophisticated heuristic on tables without `th` and `role`, which is similar (but not identical) to the heuristic used by NVDA with Firefox.

- Avoid specifying a new window as the target of a link with `target=_blank` .

Displaying new windows without warning can be very confusing to non-sighted and mobile users. Some screen readers and mobile devices give very little indication a new tab or window has opened. If you cannot avoid displaying a new window, insert an "opens in a new window" warning into the link text or add the warning to the link using a `title` attribute or `aria-label` attribute.

- Link uses general text like 'Click Here' which doesn't explain link purpose.

Screen reader users often tab from one link to the next, or use the 'Next Link' command. Moving between links labelled 'click here' sounds like 'Click here, tab, click here, tab, click here'. Change the link text, or add an `aria-label` , so the link makes sense when read without the surrounding text.
